That Covers Everything Worth Mentioning. A Column Full of Interest to Herald Readers.

Commercial Hall, one of the largest buildings on the State Fair grounds, was destroyed by fire Friday night. Many exhibits were also destroyed. The loss is about $20,000.

Prof. John G. Goggans, instructor in the technical department of Newberry College, was accidentally shot by Prof. Rountree while out hunting Thursday. One shot entered the eye, another penetrated the face and another penetrated the side. Prof. Goggans' wounds are not considered fatal, but he was hurried to an infirmary at Columbia for treatment.

The State Teachers' Association will meet at Columbia next year on March 23rd, 24th and 25th. Elaborate plans will be made for the entertainment of the teachers.

B. Aiken, a white man, was fined $30 in the Columbia city court Friday because he threatened to shoot his whole family and kill the cat when the cat refused to perform as Aiken saw a trained horse do at the fair grounds. Aiken's conduct was threatening that neighbors caused the arrest.

Pinky Scott, a negro boy aged 10, was accidentally shot and killed by Billie Britton, son of the Clerk of Court Britton, at Kingstree Friday night. The killing occurred in the night house just before the curtain was to rise for a show.

SAVES SIXTY-TWO LIVES.

Mr. Breed, Who Claimed Relationship With Pierce, Spoke With Sarcasm of Lincoln.

Pierre, S. D., Nov. 5.—Old Joe Laframboise is dead, and another link between the present days of progress and peace and that time of terror and massacre in the early days of Minnesota's history—days which are rapidly being dimmed by the passing of the men who participated in them.

But for one act of his life Old Joe would now be resting in the grave unmourned and remembered no more than those of his mixed blood companions who preceded him in the "happy hunting grounds."

But that one act has won him a place in history and in the hearts of all who know of the deeds.

It was on August 18, 1862, that Old Joe saved his name from oblivion by saving sixty-two white persons from the inevitable and horrible death by torture at the hands of the Sioux.

Fired by the eloquent tongues of Little Crow, their head war chief, the savage humor of the Sioux and Yanktonais ran rapidly through the succession of fear and doubt into hatred. The thyo-ti-pli, or war dance, was held and the massacre planned.

Laframboise knew what it meant, and prompted perhaps by the blood of his civilized ancestors, started the warning to the agency at Yellow Medicine. Here he gathered the frightened pioneers in the stone warehouse for the night, and in the morning saw them safely across the river before the storm of savage fury which carried hundreds of settlers to death was upon them.

There is nothing in the meager history of Old Joe which shows that he felt any close attachment for the whites, and after that one day of service he dropped back into his old life again.

But enough of the pride of the white man remained in him so that when the rewards for the Indians who had helped the whites in the break had run through the red of government departments Joe received nothing but a fewling implements. He accepted sullenly and refused to fight that was his right. The gift was tools he always considered personal insult.

One piece of long chain he always retained, insisting that it was the personal gift of Abraham Lincoln. His chain, when he could be prevailed upon to talk about the matter at all, he always exhibited with white scorn as the gift of the white father for his services to his white children.

Shortly before Old Joe died, the Robinson, secretary of the State Historical Society of South Dakota, visited him in his home near Verlin, in Marshall county, South Dakota. This is Mr. Robinson's account of the interview:

"I found Old Joe smoking his pipe in front of his cabin and motioned me to a seat by his side. 'My grandfater, Laframboise, was very nice man,' said Old Joe in course of the conversation, 'a nice man, very religious man, was shot in his tepees while ying hees prayers.'

"Old Joe smiles through his grizzled beard which sparsely covered is thoroughly Sioux features, and said: 'I have not said my prayers, I net reek it.'

"Joe displayed not a little Gallie pride in his ancestors. His conversation about his grandfater led him to boast of his relationship to Franklin Pierce."

"Abe Lincoln," he sneered with the utmost disdain, "heem give it me. Heem 'Publisan; he heap 'Vemocrat."

"There was a great deal of sarcasm and bitterness in Joe. Perhaps he one glimpse of the better man when he had disappointed him with the rather sordid preponderance. He refused to discuss the 'low Medicine' rescue, for that was another man, the man at Yellow Medicine."

DILLON BEST AUTO ROUTE.

Report of Engineers Favors North Carolina Route, But Virtually Admits That Dillon Route is Best.

The report of the engineers on the proposed Wilmington to Charlotte auto highway admits that the best route is by way of Dillon and Bennettsville, but there seems to be a prejudice against leaving North Carolina and dropping down into South Carolina. The report admits that the roads by way of Dillon are better and the distance is shorter. Just what action will be taken by the committee remains to be seen. The report on the North Carolina route, so far as roads and bridges are concerned, is not very favorable and the distance is greater. The pathfinding car that came by Dillon on the return trip did not follow the Fair Bluff route, but the car was detained by way of Lumberton. Had the Fair Bluff route been followed the distance would have been about 20 miles shorter. Following is the report of Mr. W. D. McMillan who drove the Chalmers 30 on the pathfinding trip:

DILLON BOYS KNIFE MAN

ARRESTED AND PUT IN JAIL TO AWAIT RESULTS.

VICTIM IN CRITICAL CONDITION

Fulton Surles and Newey Wallace Attack a News Butcher With Pocket Knives.

A row in which two Dillon boys were involved and which may terminate fatally occurred at Florence Friday night. The boys are Fulton Surles, a son of Allen Surles, and his brother-in-law, Newey Wallace, and the victim is C. W. Overstreet, a news butcher whose run is between Florence and Augusta. The news of the affair was received in Dillon Saturday afternoon by Allen Surles, the father of Fulton, in a telegram telling him that his son was in jail awaiting the result of wounds that had been inflicted upon another man with probably fatal results. It is thought that all the following is taken from the Florence correspondence to the News and Courier:

As a result of a row that had its origin in the "red light" district, just beyond the northwestern limits of the city, last night, C. W. Overstreet, a news butcher on the Florence and Augusta run, lies in a local infirmary with a bare chance of living, while W. A. Surles and his brother-in-law, N. W. Wallace, of Dillon, are behind the bars of the Florence county prison awaiting the outcome, being charged with attempting to take Overstreet's life.

From what can be gathered from the sheriff, it seems that the three men met in front of one Mabel Carlton's house, which is said to be a house of ill repute, and a quarrel took place afterwards, Surles and Wallace, it is alleged, attacked Overstreet with knives and began to slash him and then left him to get assistance as best he could.

Later in the night Overstreet was brought to a local infirmary, and it was found that he had been desperately slashed and stabbed in the stomach and back. The stab wound was in the back, and grazed the spinal chord, while the slashes in the stomach were horrible to behold. Overstreet bled profusely, and the attending physicians are apprehensive as to the outcome.

Surles and Wallace were immediately locked up in jail, where they will be held awaiting the results of their alleged knifing. A telegram from a relative of Surles was received here this afternoon, asking if the two men were in jail and a reply was sent him telling him they were.

The knifing took place beyond the city limits, in front of the Carlton woman's house, and the case, of course, comes within the jurisdiction of the State proper. Some months ago the city passed an ordinance requiring the keepers of houses of ill-fame to move out of town, and they did so without further delay, locating just beyond the city limits, just north of the Atlantic Coast Line's freight yards and transfer station, where they have created out there what is known as the "red light district."

At last accounts from the infirmary this evening Overstreet's condition is critical and the two men may have to face the charge of murder in Florence county.

HUMOR APPEALED TO HIM.

And He Laughed Twelve Hours Over Trading Mule for "Shaved-tail" Horse.

Lawrenceburg, Ind., Nov. 4.—Trading a mule for a "shaved-tail" horse appealed to the humor of H. Schraap, of this city, and he began laughing. He laughed ten minutes, an hour, with the tears rolling down his cheeks, and still he didn't stop. His friends, becoming alarmed, summoned a physician, but the physician couldn't stop the attack. When it had continued for twelve hours Schraap was given a heavy electric shock, the "ha-ha" ceased, and Schraap fell over exhausted. It was thought for a time that the man would die, but to-day he shows no ill effects from the long laugh.
